NEWS of the WEEK

Spain in Revolt

Madrid--Three Premiers in 24 hours failed to stay the wave of rebellion sweeping through Spain, aided by forces being sent across the Mediterranean from Spanish Morocco, which is entirely in the hands of the rebels. The Government is arming labor in an effort to put down riots in the larger cities.

First Straw Vote Results

Philadelphia, Pa. -- The Farm Journal's canvass of agricultural sections of 32 states give London 5,307 votes to Roosevelt's 20,369. This publication has conducted straw votes in every Presidential campaign since 1912, and constitutes, in the opinion of the editor, a reliable sample of farmers' views.

Brought May Help Farmers

Minneapolis, Minn.--Despite the trail of ruin left in the wake of the recent drought, agricultural observers advance the belief that the farmers who survived the catastrophe may find in higher grain prices a better revenue than if they had produced bumper crops. Thousands of acres, however, in the "dust bowl" will be abandoned as farms.

Reversing Precedent

Johnson City, N. Y.--Because of fiercer competition in the shoe business since the collapse of N.R.A., the Endicott-Johnson Corporation has found it necessary to cut the salaries of 500 executive employees by 10%. To the workers, Chairman George F. Johnson stated: "We're for the under-dog and we believe in retrenching first where it won't hurt so much."

Chain Stores Prosper

New York City--With mail-order houses leading the advance, the first 25 chain store corporations reporting for the first half of the year showed total sales of $1,207,000,000, a gain of 11.4% over the corresponding period of last year.

Lindbergh in Germany

Berlin--Accepting the invitation of Air Minister Hermann Goering to inspect the Reich's aircraft works, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has arrived from London and will spend six days in touring Germany's flying fields and aviation plants. He is especially interested in devices for preventing the formation of ice on airplane wings.

Deal By Phone

New York City--A trans-Atlantic phone call costing $51 closed a deal by which American investors liquidated a stake of $100,000,000 in the late Ivar Kreuger's crumbled match combine in exchange for $12,776,079 in cash. This will enable the receivers in this country to disperse a 10% dividend to the unfortunate American investors in the Swedish "match king's" enterprises.

MRS. ANGIE SWAN PARLIN

Born August 26, 1857

Died July 21, 1936
Mrs. Parlin was the daughter of John S. and Mary Brown Swan and was born at Swan's Hill in Bethel. She was a graduate of Gould Academy, also of Kents Hill Seminary, and was a very successful teacher.

It was at Kents Hill that she met the Rev. Abel Parlin of Weld, and later became his wife. Two children were born to them, Rev. Elwyn Parlin of Iron Mountain, Mich., and Leona, wife of John C. Anderson of Bethel.

There are seven grandchildren; one brother, Olin Swan of Whitinsville, Mass., and one sister, Mrs. Leona Buck of Swan's Hill, Bethel. There are also several nephews and nieces.

Mrs. Parlin was left a widow after only eight years of happy married life, but with undaunted courage she bravely carried on.

She was gifted with a gracious cordiality that made, and kept many loyal friends in whatever place in life she chanced to be. Of a deeply religious nature, she was devoted to her church and all things pertaining to it. Living each day helping to bear some one's burden. A cheerful word and pleasant smile was ever her greeting. Capable and efficient, she worked as companion and nurse in many homes for a long time.

But the last few years have been passed in the home of her daughter, where, busy with helpful tasks and the companionship of her loved ones she did not seem to grow old, and was always so happy to greet her friends that we had not thought she would leave us so soon. Her last illness was of only two weeks duration.

Gently soft fingers have smoothed the white tresses
Back from the forehead so dear,
And God has banished all cares of care
And the youthful mother grows near.

But closed are the lips in a silence so deep
That we know they are sealed by God,
So we say "goodbye" with trembling voice
As we pass 'neath the chastening rod.

She would bid us, we know, raise the curtain
And let the bright sunshine come,
To drive away the deep shadows
That have darkened the dear old home.

We will strive to do her bidding
For so oft we have heard her say
That faith in God's wonderful wisdom
Would carry us all the way.

Funeral services will be held at Greenleaf's Funeral Home, Saturday at two o'clock and burial will be in the family lot at Middle Intervale.

Bethel, July 22, 1936. A. K. M.

FIRE TRUCK NOW UNDER CONSTRUCTION

The committee in charge of motorizing the village fire apparatus has purchased a Lincoln sedan of Clarence Bennett and it is now being remodeled at Crockett's Garage. It seems to be an ideal foundation for changing to the desired form, carrying the ladders and hose in one vehicle.

The work will include an increase of 60 inches in length, making a wheelbase of 196 inches. The ladders will be carried overhead, with ample space beneath for hose and accessories and room enough for the addition of a booster tank if desired later.

It is expected that three weeks will be necessary for the completion of the work.

STATE RECORDS SHOW SAFETY DEPENDS UPON ENFORCEMENT

Evidence that increased policing and intensified enforcement of laws definitely reduce the number of traffic fatalities is presented in official reports from several states, according to the National Highway Users Conference.

Official records of several states, including Alabama, California, Florida, Illinois, Missouri and North Carolina, are cited by the Conference as providing proof that increased patrolling and enforcement promotes highway safety.

In California, for instance, rural road fatalities in five selected counties decreased 20.4% last year, as compared with 1934, with an increase of 14.7% in patrol hours and despite a heavy increase in motor vehicle registrations.

GOLDEN HEART
Refrigerated BREAD

I'm one of the old fashioned mothers,
But I'm changing every day.
I used to bake and work for hours,
But now have more time for play.

I never thought I'd quit baking bread,
Till I found a loaf just like my own.
And now I buy The GOLDEN HEART brand—
Which delights everyone in my home.

We keep it in the ice chest,
Call it a refrigerator if you will—
It keeps so moist and delicious
When it's given a slight chill.

So don't you be old-fashioned,
Buy GOLDEN HEART BREAD every day.
And HEALTH and long life will be yours
While you travel the GOLDEN HEART way.

Thanks, Mrs. HOUSEWIFE, for these words of praise in favor of
GOLDEN HEART BREAD.

JEFFERSON'S FORESIGHT

If we run into such debt as that we must be taxed in our meat and in our drink, in our necessities and our amusements, for our callings and our creeds, as the people of England are our people, like them, must come to labor 16 hours in the 24, give the government 15 of these to the Government for their debts and daily expenses, and the sixteenth being insufficient to afford us bread, we must live on they now do on natural and political, have to turn to them, no means of calling the managers to account, we are glad to obtain subsistence by doing ourselves out to live on the crumbs on the neck of our fellow citizens. Thomas Jefferson

Property in the form of labor, property is desirable in a positive sense in the world. That man should be rich shows that others may become rich, hence in just compensation to industry and enterprise. Abraham Lincoln

CROPS GROWN WITHOUT SOIL MAY REVOLUTIONIZE FARMING

All the elements of a Sunday newspaper magazine "thriller" are included in recent reports from California telling of experiments with crops grown in heated tanks in greenhouses without an ounce of soil. The possibilities of this new method of growing food are of tremendous importance, because of the enormous yields of high quality crops produced. Tomatoes for example, yielded at the annual rate of 217 tons per acre of tank surface, compared with the average outdoor yield of about 5 tons.

The experiment used in these experiments to not elaborate Dr. W. P. Henshaw of the University of California Agricultural Experiment Station, because considered years ago that soil of itself, was not essential to plant growth. Experiments with grain, he found that nutrient salts added to clean sand proved a satisfactory source of plant food. In later experiments with tomatoes, the sand was enriched by rectangular sheet metal basins eight inches deep were filled with water to which nutrient salts had been added. These were covered with wire mesh which in turn supported a layer of excelsior or straw in which the seeds are "planted".

As the plants grew, their roots draw food from the tank below. The plant must be supported by wires and strings in the experiment with tomatoes, the plants were set in December, began to bear in April and continued to bear until the following December, when the experiment was terminated. Two large commercial installations have now been made in California. Yields of beans, turnips, carrots and tobacco have been phenomenal.

"WELL, GRAHAM, I'LL STICK TO MY HORSE."

Washington Snapshots
by JAMES PRESTON

The latest sad story in figures is making Washington faces both happy and grim. The happy are those who seek a cure for the squandering epidemic. The grim are those who wish that statements on the government's financial condition did not have to be made every year.

The happy now hope that the financial statements will make the 126,000,000 American people see where they are heading. The grim fear that is what will happen.

The plan was happy too for a time. That was when newspapers emphasized only that the government debt was $3,779,000,000; that expenditures for the last year were $5,000,000,000; that the deficit for the year was $4,764,000,000. Their happiness was based upon the fact that billions are almost beyond human comprehension, and that they mean nothing to the average man.

But that happiness was short-lived. First, the Associated Press calculated that the figures showed that out of each $1 spent by the federal government last year, 54 cents was borrowed. In other words, that Uncle Sam went in debt to the tune of 54 cents out of each dollar he spent because his taxes were bringing in only 46 cents.

That was followed by other calculations making the picture more depressing. It was figured, for instance, that the $4,764,000,000 deficit meant an increase of $38 in the debt on each man, woman and child in the country, or an increase of $152 on each average family of four.

Knotholes & Sawdust

Vol. I, No. 7 Issued by L. E. Davis, Bethel July 23, 1936

"If I marry you," said a small boy to his mother, "would you let me keep my job at the may I go in to swim?" for Ella Olson last office. Will I let Mother, "certainly not, week. Darned if I don't see these young fellows start building themselves up."

Well, well, people just do keep buying those Big Mac Shingles. We just loaded some up on Mechanic St. for Ed Coburn's house.

A painter who lived in Great Britain. Interrupted two girls with their knittin'. He said with a sigh, "That park bench well I just painted it right where you're sittin' mine."

Next, the $33,779,000,000 debt was translated into similar figures, showing that Uncle Sam's total debt amounted to $269 for each person, or $1,076 for the average family. And that the total cost of running the federal government last year was $70.48 per person, or $282 per family.

Washington correspondents then began to emphasize the tax angle, pointing out that the only way Uncle Sam could pay his debt was by taking $1,076 in taxes from every family in the land.

THAT DISTANT TOMORROW

"We are not old tomorrow," wrote Paul Speicher some time ago. "Therein lies the difficulty. If we were old tomorrow, selecting investments which would liquidate tomorrow or which would bring us a certain income tomorrow would be a fairly easy assignment. But if we are not old for ten or fifteen or twenty years from tomorrow, to buy investments which we know will liquidate without loss at the end of twenty years is an almost impossible task."

This is a sombre thought, but its truth is undeniable. And in it can be found the reason why so many foresighted men have decided to permit their savings to be invested by others by experts, trained in the intricacies of finance, whose judgment has been proven sound. These men turn to life insurance, to trust funds and to similar plans for providing future security, because they wisely understand their own limitations. So far as is humanly possible, they do away with the risk attendant upon investment. They look forward without fear to an independent old age. They have observed the tragic examples of thousands of others.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

You could safely bet that both James A. Farley and John M. Hamilton, rival political Merlins of the major parties, are keeping eager eyes fixed on the business barometer. And they are likewise watching the comments of businessmen on the burning subject of the New Deal.

As the astute Frank Kent recently observed, few presidents have been beaten when business was improving—yet no candidate has been elected when the sentiment of businessmen was overwhelmingly against him. Today, beyond argument, business is improving—but 90-odd per cent of our industrial leaders seem firmly convinced that the reelection of Mr. Roosevelt would, to put it mildly, be unfortunate for the country. Some of them say that if a Republican had sat in the White House business would have improved much faster and be much better than it is. But they can't prove it, while the President can point to the undeniable statistics to buttress his position. Even so, bright as the business picture is in comparison with the dark days of 1932 and 1933, there are plenty of shadows in sight.

The best index available, usually considered to be the Federal Reserve Board's, takes the period of 1923-25 and regards it as normal, 100. At the depth of depression, with an arbitrary point rating of the index, compared with this normal period, stood at 69. Today it is close to 100 again, which would indicate that the nation has emerged almost completely from hard times. However, since 1925, there has been a 13% increase in our population. Therefore, the index would have to stand at about 113 to show industrial activity equal to that of 1923-25. Other commentators say that the Reserve Board's index, being based entirely on industrial output as distinct from consumption of goods, leaves much to be desired.

Many efforts have been made to judge America's recovery from depression in the light of the experience abroad. Best surveys place us at about average. But the problems of exchange, of different standards of living, of the questionable statistics issued by some important foreign governments, make a large margin of error inevitable.

A really accurate report on the employment situation would be of immense help in evaluating America's progress. But none exists—we have estimates of the number unemployed, ranging from five to fifteen millions.

Accurate statistics on industrial payrolls do exist. These payrolls now stand at 80% of the 1929 level. "Real wages" are a trifle higher, as the purchasing power of the dollar is greater now than it was then. But if we make allowance for the increase in population the payroll picture becomes less favorable.

Thus, the voter has no way of finding out whether times are as good as the friends of the Administration say they are, or as bad as its opponents hold. All he can get is the general trend—the up or down movement of the many correlated indexes. Even so, he will be in a quandary—if there is improvement, how much of it is natural, and how much the artificial result of government pump-priming?

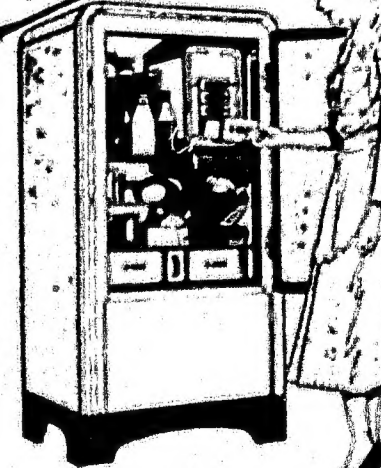

If there should be a Republican sweep this year, resulting in the election of Governor Landon and GOP majority in the House, the party's legislative problems would be far from simple. Reason: It is mathematically impossible for Republicans to control the Senate. Thirty-four Senators are for reelection—and if the Republicans win every contested seat, Democrats will still have a majority of two. And thirteen of the tests are in the South, where Democratic primary nominations tantamount to election.

Centenary of McGuffey

Oxford, O.—Just 100 years ago the first edition of McGuffey's Eclectic Reader came off the press, product of Professor William Holmes McGuffey, of the newly formed Miami University of this place. Since then more than 122,000,000 of the readers have been issued; they were the basic schoolbooks in 37 states, and Oxford will this week celebrate the appearance of one of the most influential textbooks ever to become a part of the American educational system.

Dentistry Recovering

San Francisco, Cal.—Ten thousand members of the American Dental Association, gathered here for the 78th annual convention, were cheered when President George B. Winter, of St. Louis, made the statement: "American teeth are coming out—out of the depression." He estimated that during the financial depression "about 50% of the people decided to forget the dentist." Reports the country over indicate a revival of practice.

Boy's Death Disturbs Jersey

Trenton, N. J.—The death of Donald Hastic, 3 years old, who in his hunger ate house-paint and died, has focussed all eyes on the problem of relief in this State. The States Treasury was spending $3,000,000 a month on relief when it came to the end of its rope last April. This threw the burden on 448 separate communities. Since then local government boards have slashed their relief rolls to the bone. From the Works Progress Administration came the statement that "starvation and disease are stalking through many dilapidated homes in New Jersey." The New Jersey League of Municipalities, after surveying 60 communities, quotes this from Jefferson Township: "We discontinued relief and told them to get out and scratch, which they did and are getting along O. K."

A Shavian Birthday

London—George Bernard Shaw will be 80 years old this week. Although three generations have given him the longest lifetime record for popularity, he was unimpressed when asked for an interview. "Who is interested in my birthday?" he demanded. "I am not distinguished by having birthdays. Anybody can have a birthday."

"Sell-and-Switch" in Trouble

Chicago, Ill.—Five corporations and 21 individuals were indicted by the Securities and Exchange Commission for alleged frauds totalling $10,000,000 through the "sell-and-switch" racket in the past three years. This is by far the largest swindling case we have ever handled," said John J. Burns, general counsel of the SEC. The plan operated by the group was to induce investors to buy a gilt edged security, then switch them to a wild-cat promotion as soon as they had a small profit.

Wheat Shortage Indicated

Chicago, Ill.—Against an indicated domestic demand of 700,000,000 bushels, the best estimates of the Department of Agriculture for this year's yield run to 635,000,000. If this ratio prevails, it will mean the fourth successive year during which domestic consumption exceeded production requiring importation of the difference from abroad.

Speed Records Crumple

Windsor, Utah—Driving a Buick Roadster special around the Bonneville Salt Flats, George E. T. Fyson, an English racing driver, covered 634 miles in 18 hours at an average speed of 135.49 miles per hour. During the racing test he smashed a number of records for automobile speeds. His achievement is rumored to have cost the Buick-Royce Company $30,000.

Excommunication

Camelsdale, England—Because he violated the fifth Commandment "Honor thy Father and thy Mother," James Bunting was excommunicated from the Church of England by the Rt. Rev. George K. A. Bell, Lord Bishop of Chichester, the first such sentence in 100 years of Church history. A coroner's jury investigating the suicide of Bunting's parents, the Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Bunting, placed the responsibility for their act on the refusal of the son to help his parents in their financial distress.

Girl Musher Rescues Priest

Juneau, Alaska—Pursuing his ethnological studies in the vast wilderness called by natives "The End of the World," from which no one is supposed ever to return to civilization, the Rev. Richard R. Hubbard, the "Glacier Priest," was snatched on a lonely rock, where his boat overturned in the river rapids. While his companion, Kurt (Nicholson), former Santa Clara (Cal.) University football star, swam to shore for help, Mary Boye, famous girl musher of Alaska, happened along in a motor boat and rescued the adventurous divine, who promptly retrieved his boat and pushed on toward the Taku River.

Dust in the "brown" snow, which fell in February on Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, got its start in Oklahoma, Texas, or Kansas, according to the weather bureau. This storm deposited 31 pounds of dust an acre in the area where the snow fell. Every 10 tons of dust included 1080 pounds of lime.

Floods in 13 eastern States in the spring of 1935 are estimated to have caused nearly 200 deaths and damage totalling at least $300,000,000 and to have left 200,000 persons homeless, besides crippling industry and transportation in many areas.

Synthetic Gentleman

It was after six o'clock now. The outside offices were deserted and silent. But the noise of traffic drifted up from the street.

For almost a minute, that was the only sound in the room where these two men sat facing each other.

Then Peter said, "Yes, they were the same man."

"I was sure of it," Barry resumed. "The papers reported that Selby was drowned in Philadelphia. But the body they identified had been in the water two weeks. Fresh water. So that identification didn't amount to much. Violet Fane had told me Morano bought the house down town because he was 'married once' and he and his wife lived there. The sobriety I dug out of the tabloids said Selby was 'happily married' with his bride in a house he'd rented down town. Obviously, the same house. Sentimental? Yes, but Morano was a sentimental cuss. So sentimental that he might have died rather than have it discovered that your wife was really his wife."

Barry saw Peter wince, but went on.

"Of course, he had another reason for resisting arrest—that 'hot spot' with which Kelly threatened him. If Morano had been arrested, and finger-printed, they'd've learned that he was George Selby, and wanted for murder. Morano made certain of that. The 2:12 train he caught at the Penn station went to Philadelphia. That's where he was all the next day—checking up on the finger prints taken when Selby was sent to the State penitentiary, and, perhaps, trying, through underground channels, to have them removed from the files.

"I had the motive for the murder now.

"Kelly knew Morano was Selby, and so that your wife was technically a bigamist. That was the threat he held over Morano, and Judge Hamblidge. The threat that persuaded the Judge to write a 'crooked decision'. The paper Kelly had in his pocket was a marriage certificate, or something of the sort, he'd found somewhere."

"In an old trunk," Peter said; "in the house he bought at 24 Jefferson street."

Barry nodded.

"I doped that out, too. Both Mo-

"I Doped That Out, Too."

same and Hamblidge had plenty of reason to be fully satisfied. That was the end of the matter as far as you were concerned.

"If you knew of the existence of that paper.

"And you did, didn't you? That's where Morano's telephone message came in. That's why he called you up from the Coconut Bar. To tell you he'd seen the paper, and Kelly had it."

"Right," Winslow said, simply.

"My inquiry was narrowing down to you and Morano. But how did either of you get in to Kelly? And then I remembered that, the day I first saw Mrs. Kelly, she came into that house and left her key in the door. I did the same thing this week. Anybody might. Especially a drunken man. That would explain why the key wasn't on Kelly's body. It would explain how our third caller entered while Kelly was talking to Judge Hamblidge."

"Right," Winslow repeated.

"Was the third caller you or Morano? And then I remembered two things. Morano took the 2:12 to Philadelphia to check on those finger-prints. He wouldn't've done that if he'd known Kelly was dead. The house was dark and silent when Morano got to Sixteenth street. He thought Kelly'd gone to bed, and so he went to Philadelphia. I was sure of that. And I was sure that the man who killed Kelly wore gloves."

"On a hot night.

"Not because he'd thought of finger-prints, but because he was accustomed to wearing gloves, even in summer."

"It was red-hot the day I came here to tell you about Nolan.

"And your gloves were lying there with your hat."

Peter smiled, faintly.

"I remember, too," he said. "You picked one of them up. But, of course, I might merely have been carrying them."

Barry smiled, also.

"You might," he admitted. "But the glove that fell on the floor was turned inside out. People don't carry gloves that way."

"Well," Winslow observed, "Harwood didn't make any mistake when he said you were a good newspaper man. You're right about everything. My wife was Mrs. Selby. She thought Selby was dead, of course, when she married me. Two or three years ago, I met him on the street. He was a d-d decent. 'Believe it or not, I was terribly in love with Julie,' he said. 'I still am. But God knows I'm no husband for her, and you are. You've nothing to fear from me,' he said.

"But I did fear. All my life, I've had one conviction. Murder will out. Everything comes to the surface sooner or later. I urged Julie to get a divorce. 'I can't,' she said, 'without more dreadful publicity. It would ruin your career,' she said. Always thinking of me, Julie is."

He touched the tell-tale magnet, almost lovingly.

"We were still talking about it," he continued, "when Julie went all to pieces again. Just as she had when the tabloids printed the story you saw. I took her to Europe. When we came back, Selby'd disappeared. I didn't even know his new name, and, of course, I didn't look for him. I persuaded myself the danger was over."

"Then came the Jefferson street grab."

"I was upset about what the newspapers said of Judge Hamblidge. I'd no idea of what was back of that, of course, and he didn't tell me. I figured that they'd got to him, somehow. And then Morano telephoned, the night of the murder, to say Kelly'd been to the Coconut Bar. He'd had the marriage certificate some time, and, through an underworld connection, he knew Selby was alive, but he'd only just found out that Selby was Morano. Some one had told him that afternoon—probably the same man who tipped off Luis' telephone message to Morano. 'Now, I've got you, and Hamblidge, and Winslow.' He has, too," Luis added, "unless you can find a way out of it."

Winslow's hand closed tightly.

"Julie was upstairs, asleep," he said. "She'd left me an hour before, radiantly happy. I went to see Kelly. Heaven knows what I intended to do. Certainly not murder. I was about to ring the bell, when I saw the key in the door, and used it. Kelly was talking to Hamblidge. I recognized the Judge's voice, and slipped into the dining room. Listening, I learned why he had written that decision. And I heard Kelly say, 'If it ain't filed by noon today, I'll have your sister-in-law arrested for bigamy.'"

"Hamblidge said, 'You can do what you like; I won't file it.'"

"The cut-glass decanter was on the table in front of me. I picked it up, almost mechanically. Kelly was in the hall then, shouting 'squealers' and 'beat it.' I suppose I had some vague idea of helping my brother-in-law. I don't know. Anyway, I opened the door between the dining room and the drawing room. And, as I did so, Kelly came in from the hall, closing that door behind him. His left hand was still on the knob when he saw me.

"More squealers!" he shouted. "Witnesses! So you heard, did you? Well, by God, you're not going to tell anybody!"

"He lifted his right hand, and there was a revolver in it."

"Another instant, and he'd've fired."

"I hurled the decanter."

"It was just instinct. I didn't take aim. There wasn't time. If I meant to do anything, it was to hit his pistol arm. I don't really know where the bottle did strike. The side of Kelly's head, probably, for it landed against a metal door-hinge, rebounded, fell into a chair, and rolled off to the floor. A moment afterward, Kelly went down in a heap."

"He wasn't dead. A long way from it, for the gun had dropped out of his hand, and he reached for it. I picked it up. Ten seconds later, Hamblidge was on the other side of that door, trying to open it, and calling Kelly. I turned the lights out. Hamblidge left. I put the revolver into my pocket, and got the certificate out of Kelly's. There was a white push-button in the door-frame. I pressed it—or thought I did—and hurried through the dining room into the street. Evidently, the bell didn't ring, for it seems that no one came to Kelly's assistance."

"It never occurred to me that Kelly was anything more than stunned. I went home, and burned that marriage certificate. There was no other record; I'd made sure of that. A few hours later, Hamblidge phoned to say he'd filed his decision. There was nothing about Kelly in the morning paper. I'd no idea he was dead until long after dinner that night at Southampton."

Barry nodded.

"Of course, my first impulse was to give myself up," Winslow said. "But what good would that've done? They couldn't convict me. I'd killed in self-defense, and could come mighty near proving it. But, in doing so, I've given away the secret I'd struggled to keep all these years. I've smashed Julie utterly, and ruined Hamblidge, and Pat. Nobody was harmed by my keeping my mouth shut. There wasn't a chance of their finding Blodder guilty, or anyone else. If they'd done that, I'd've confessed in a moment."

"I know," Barry declared. "That's what you meant when you said, 'If we have to get the guilty man to free Rogers, we'll do it, but let's give the court a chance first.'"

"Yes."

Peter rose, and went to the window.

"The difficult thing," he continued, "was not to confess. With that boy in jail. But it was letting an innocent man suffer a few weeks, or an innocent woman all her life. If you'd seen Julie's face, when she collapsed, after hearing of Selby's arrest—" He paused. "Of course, neither she nor Hamblidge knows I killed Kelly."

Barry said, "They'll never know it through me."

"Bon voyage," he added, blithely, an instant later, his hat in his hand. "And come back soon. I'd like to have you two at my wedding."

MAINE CROPS EXPECTED TO BE LARGER THAN IN 1935

Maine crops except fruit and wheat are expected to be larger than last year according to a joint report released today by the Maine and the United States Departments of Agriculture. The acreage planted to potatoes in Maine for 1936 is estimated at 156,000 acres compared with 162,000 harvested in 1935. In Aroostook County rains interfered with planting and the crop on July 1 was quite backward. Because of high prices a considerable quantity of low quality seed was used in planting the crop. Conditions prevailing on July 1 indicate a production of 39,780,000 bushels compared with 38,880,000 bushels harvested in 1935. The five year average production (1928-1932) was 44,078,000 bushels.

There has been a decrease in the acreage planted to potatoes in all sections of New England except Rhode Island due to scarcity of seed and unfavorably wet weather in Northern New England. The outlook on July 1 forecast a production of 49,273,000 bushels of potatoes in New England this year, compared with 47,276,000 harvested in 1935 and 51,586,000 bushels the five year average 1928-1932. In most parts of New England conditions during May and June were moderately favorable to the potato crop.

Corn acreage planted in Maine at 12,000 acres was the same as that planted in 1935. The acreage of oats and barley remains unchanged with oats acreage totaling 113,000 acres. Wheat acreage was reduced 30% in 1936. The total production of oats is estimated at 4,181,000 bushels compared with 4,068,000 bushels harvested last year. The acreage of tame hay remains the same as last season. Weather conditions have been favorable to the hay crop and production is expected to total 876,000 tons compared with 846,000 tons harvested last year, and 890,000 tons the five year average production 1928-1932. Pasture conditions are not quite as good as last year and on July 1, averaged 86% of normal, compared with 91% a year ago and 88% the ten year average.

The total production of apples in Maine is forecast at 504,000 bushels a decrease of about 44% from last year's crop and even less than the short crop of 1934. The late frosts during blossoming time are probably the largest factor in this decrease. For New England as a whole, the apple crop is forecast at 3,235,000 bushels, compared with 5,802,000 bushels harvested last year and 7,787,000 bushels the five year average 1928-1932. The crop for the United States of 103,214,000 bushels for 1936 is the smallest crop since 1921. The pear crop in Maine will total only about 4,000 bushels compared with 13,000 bushels the five year average. For New England as a whole pear production totaling 73,000 is 39% below the five year average of 119,000 bushels.

The adoption of soil management practices and cropping systems that provide for soil conservation and improvement are necessary to the permanent economic welfare of the nation.

Indications are that there will be a slight increase in the acreage of corn and snap beans planted for commercial canning this year.

NEW BOOKLET TELLS OF STATE'S ATTRACTIONS

A new 48-page issue of the State's leading recreational booklet, "Maine The Land of Remembered Vacations" said to be "the most beautiful and informative piece of literature ever printed" is ready for distribution by the Maine Development Commission.

For the first time colored photography is used in a Maine booklet to enhance other pleasing innovations of a character new in literature of this type.

Five four-color illustrations augmented by 80 black and white photographs depicting every phase of the state's scenic beauties and recreational, industrial and agricultural advantages are used in the booklet to tell the story of Maine pictorially.

Radically departing from all previous designs, the new cover of "Maine, The Land of Remembered Vacations" is of the cut-out type framing a beautiful camping scene on the title page. Of forest green cover stock made especially for this booklet, the cover is enriched by a gold-embossed design that frames the cutout portion continuing to a point just below the frame where it encircles the Maine seal. Near the bottom of the cover the name Maine appears, also embossed in gold.

Following out the same motif, the back cover consists of a gold-embossed lake scene against the green background.

Departing from the usual procedure of dealing with each section of the state separately, the text of the new booklet first marshals the state's natural recreational, industrial, and agricultural advantages for the readers information and then continues with a running story of Maine from one end to the other with the result that the whole thing attains continuity, a rare accomplishment in a booklet.

The type used is the easily-read 12 point Garamond while the headings are of 14 point hand-tooled Goudy. Numerous thumbnail sketches scattered throughout the pages add greatly to the general attractiveness.

Being the state's leading piece of literature, no efforts were spared this year in making it attractive enough to be a distinct addition to any library table.

Fifteen hundred and eighty-five local women, voluntary leaders of farm bureau groups, worked with the 14 home demonstration agents of Maine last year in forwarding the Extension teaching program of the University of Maine, College of Agriculture and the United States Department of Agriculture.

JAPANESE BEETLE TRAPPING

In cooperation with local officials, the U. S. Department of Agriculture is now placing men in the field to ascertain the spread of the Japanese beetle. This insect is a pest of economic importance in the eastern section of this country where it has become established. It feeds as grub on roots of grasses and other plants, and in the adult stage on foliage, flowers, and fruits of a variety of plants. Metal traps are used to capture the adult. While placing and inspecting traps it will be necessary to enter private property, and the cooperation of the public is solicited. Police officials have been notified of the nature of the work. The inspectors bear credentials which will be produced on request.

The Japanese beetle spends most of its life cycle in the ground as a small white grub. However, in the summer, the adult is present and it is in this stage that the more serious damage is done. The adult is about the size of the common potato beetle, but is colored differently. The head and thorax are green and the hard wing covers brown. Positive identification are the five white spots down each side of the abdomen and two white spots at the tip. First appearance is generally noted on grape leaves or in the blossoms of flowering plants. The adult does not eat large holes in the leaves, but feeds between the veins giving the leaf a lace-like appearance.

A trap consists of a four-winged baffle, mounted on top of a funnel, to the bottom of which is attached a receptacle. The assembly is suspended from a wire upright which is set in the ground. A portion of the baffle is cut out and in this is placed the bait dispenser. From this block is vaporized the odor of the chemical attractants. The beetles attracted by this odor fly against the baffles and fall down into the receptacle where they are trapped.

Employees engaged in this survey do not have specific information about plant pests in general. Residents should direct requests for plant pest information to the State Department of Agriculture. For additional information about the Japanese beetle, address U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, Glenwood Avenue and Henry Street, Bloomfield, New Jersey.

PLAN STATE 4-H CAMP AT ORONO

One hundred sixty-eight 4-H boys and girls, 12 from each county in Maine, and 12 local club leaders have been selected to take part in the sixth annual state camp and short course at the University of Maine, August 19 to 23, according to Kenneth C. Lovejoy, state 4-H club leader.

Classes in poultry, crops, rope work, dairy judging and showing, cooking, clothing, and home improvement are among the subjects planned.

Recreational activities will include organized field and track events, instrumental and vocal musical training, campfire programs a final candle-lighting Saturday evening, August 22, and outdoor church services on Sunday, with Joseph Chapman, of Philadelphia, Pa., as guest speaker.

THREE QUARTER CENTURY CLUB TO MEET AT TOPSHAM, AUGUST 25

The famous Three Quarter Century Club of Maine will hold its twelfth annual meeting on August 25th at the Topsham Fair Grounds, being entertained by the communities, Topsham, Brunswick and Bath. The Maine Public Health Ass'n originated this unique club in 1925 and since that date has sponsored its maintenance. About 14,000 members are enrolled, all of them citizens of Maine and over 75 years of age.

Members of the Club are looking forward to the meeting with a great deal of interest and are already making plans to attend. Hon. Wilbur C. Oliver of Bath is the efficient President; Col. F. E. Philbrick of Rockland was elected Vice-President, but has since resigned; "Happy Gene" Staples, Champion Fiddler of Maine, from Dixfield is Secretary; and the Executive Committee is composed of Rev. Glendon Mayo of Brewer, Mrs. Helen Prince of Sanford, and Mrs. Sarah Nash of Harrington.

The topic for the literary contest is: "Social Life in Maine 75 Years Ago." Essays must be received at the office of the Maine Public Health Association by August 18th so that the Judges may be given an opportunity to read the submitted papers and make their decision.

The guests are requested to bring picnic lunches, but coffee, cream and sugar will be furnished by the hosts. The various committees appointed are planning on some unique surprises, about which announcements will be made later. Special effort will be made to have a meeting of the members over 100 years of age.

PLANNED ECONOMY Industrial Press Service

"Planned economy" is a phrase that drops glibly from the lips of excited orators who, first, perhaps not openly, that the American form of government isn't such a good one.

Soviet Russia has "planned economy," telling every man how much he can raise, what he can sell for, what he may earn, how long he may work, what he may eat, wear, and do. And the result?

The Saturday Review, published in London, gives these figures on prevailing food prices in Russia: Bread, 40 cents a loaf; butter, $2 a pound; cigarettes, $1 a package of 20; coffee $4 a pound; sugar 25 cents a pound.

Now isn't it?

The farm and cottage tax bill in 1935 was $367,000,000, the smallest since 1917.

SMALL ATTENDANCE AT LEGION SHOW, "THE CIRCUS" TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

The comedy, "The Circus," was presented under the auspices of the George A. Mundt Post, American Legion, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at Odeon Hall. A matinee was given Tuesday afternoon and a parade that evening. The production was directed by Miss Marjorie Lyden of the Amateur Theatre Guild of Boston, with performers as announced in last week's Citizen.

Large audiences were not present at any of the performances, although various features of the show and specialties were very pleasing.
